

Greetings,
This is a ridiculous issue, as it's comparable to the concept of taking away/limiting HBO because the non-premium channels don't want the competition.

It's not right in that situation, and it isn't right in this one.

I bought and pay for XM Radio because I was tired of the same 10 channels, playing the same 10 songs, diluted with commercials every 5 minutes. I have a right to listen to whatever I choose, and I choose XM.

Americans know quality and they know a good product when they see it. That's why XM has been so successful. Don't lower the quality of service that XM radio is providing because it's "too good", it would be counter productive.

Thank you,
Matthew J. Brown
